How you can help Fledglings

The Abiligrip, which Oliver is holding, is just one of many specialist products provided by Fledglings. The grip can be used with pens and cutlery, allowing Oliver's hands to keep up with his imagination.

Fledglings provides ongoing support to children and families living with a wide variety of disabilities. We research and supply products which help disabled children enjoy better quality of life and achieve milestones; we run a helpline to support parents when times are tough and they are feeling alone. Fledglings is always here for these families, but the charity can only continue to provide support with the help of regular donations.

When you support Fledglings with regular donations, the child may never know your name, neither may the parent talking to the Fledgling's helpline; but the difference you make to their lives is vital. You are one of the threads of a comfort blanket or the paw pad of a favourite teddy – always present, always comforting and essential every single day. A single thread may be small but the comfort blanket would unravel without it.

Changing Lives

Izzy has an imaginary friend called Humbug. Humbug goes everywhere with Izzy, providing hugs when times are tough and joining in on her everyday adventures. Izzy's world wouldn't be the same if Humbug were not always by her side.

Fledglings is also here to support Izzy, every step of the way, with specialist products such as cups for independent drinking, orthopaedic footwear, developmental and sensory toys, learning resources and products to keep her safe whilst she is sleeping.

Disabled children need support every single day, as do their parents and families. Comfort and support comes in many guises. It can be a blanket, a teddy, an old woolly jumper, or a regular donation to Fledglings.

“As a parent of a special needs child you sometimes feel alone with your problems. But Fledglings are always there at the end of the telephone to help no matter how big or minor the problems.” Jill (parent)
